

COELHO

WINERY

Coelho means “rabbit” in Portuguese and is pronounced simply “Quail Oh.”

Make Moments

A bottle of wine is not simply a beverage. When you open a bottle, whether at a celebration or during a moment of quiet contemplation, it creates a significant and unique moment forever tied to that bottle of wine. Our wines create moments of great value for our customers.

Good Winemakers are Farmers First

Dave and Deolinda Coelho are farmers who make wine. It seems that everyone in Oregon makes wine. But very few are farmers who are intimately connected to the soil.

The Coelhos started farming about 800 acres of row crops in the San Joaquin Valley in California. Now they farm grapes in Oregon’s Willamette Valley on three different soil types, each site providing unique flavors for Pinot Noir.

In 2004, we bottled our first vintage of Pinot Noir and have not looked back. In the years since, we’ve added two other vineyards right around the winery and now produce single-vineyard Pinot Noir, Pinot Gris, and Chardonnay from our own fruit.

We’re All In

Dave and Deolinda are all-in, hands-on, all day, every day in the vineyards and at the winery. The wine that you pour, for better or for worse, is a direct product of our team, each of whom is as all-in as the Coelhos.

To guarantee quality, we control all aspects of the process from farming all our own fruit in the vineyard to winemaking to warehousing and order fulfillment.

Honest Wine at Honest Prices

For our families wine is food, gracing the table at every dinner. We farm honest wine at honest prices so that it can be available at any table for any moment, without pretense, to simply be enjoyed.

From our daily-drinking Bunny Cuvée line to our handcrafted single-vineyard line, our wines are food-friendly leaders in every retail category.
